A research topic was recently proposed in the field of law and development. It considers the possible existence of different and new roles for the law to play in contemporary development strategies and seeks to empirically observe and describe the legal implications of development trajectories.

Engaged in this debate, the Brazilian Center for Analysis and Planning (CEBRAP) is organizing the workshop LANDS - Law and the New Developmental State in Latin America. At this meeting researchers will present and discuss papers on the role of law in trade policy, finance, foreign direct investment, and social policy in Brazil, Colombia, Mexico and Venezuela. They will be joined by Brazilian and international experts who will comment on the studies.

This seminar is sponsored by the Ford Foundation and will be held in English.

Agenda

Day 1 - 12/05 – Thursday

9h – Opening

- David Trubek (University of Wisconsin, Madison, USA) “Law and the ‘New Developmentalism’”
- Denise Dora (Ford Foundation Rio de Janeiro)
- Vera Schattan (Cebrap Research Director)

Panel 1 – The New Developmentalism: state and law (9:30-11h)

- David M. Trubek (University of Wisconsin, Madison) “Developmental States and the Legal Order: Towards a New Political Economy of Development and Law”
- Glauco Arbix (Finep/USP, Brazil)
- Fábio Sá e Silva (IPEA – Institute of Applied Economic Research, Brazil)

11-11:20h – coffee break

Panel 2 – Development and finance (11:20-13:20h)

Authors:

- Mario Schapiro (FGV, Brasil) “Rediscovering the Developmental Path? Developmental Bank, Law and Innovation Finance in the Brazilian Economy”
Commentators:

- Charles D. Maddox (O.P. Jindal Global Law School, India)
- José Carlos de Souza Braga (UNICAMP Institute of Economics, Brazil)
- Mansueto Almeida (IPEA – Institute of Applied Economic Research, Brazil)

13:20h – 15h - lunch

Panel 3 – Law and social policy (15-17:30h)

Authors:

- Helena Alviar García (Universidad de Los Andes, Colombia) “Social Policy and the New Development State: The Case of Columbia”
- Manuel Gomez (Florida International University, USA) “Law, Governance and Social Policies in Venezuela: The Case of Two Bolivarian Misiones”
- Diogo R. Coutinho (USP/Cebrap, Brazil) “Law and Development Policies in Brazil: Decentralization and Coordination in the Bolsa Familia Program”

Commentators:

- Marta Arretche (USP/Cebrap, Brazil)
- Fabio Veras Soares (IPC – International Policy Center for Inclusive Growth, Brazil)

19:30h – Dinner for commentators, authors and special guests

Day 2 - 13/05 – Friday

Panel 4 – Development and trade (10-12h)

Authors:

- Alvaro Santos (Georgetown Law Center, USA) “Carving Out Policy Autonomy for Developing Countries in the WTO”
- Michelle Sanchez (FGV, Brazil) “Developmental Responses to the International Trade Legal Game: Examples of intellectual Property and Export Credit Law Reforms in Brazil”

Commentators:

- Joanne Scott (University College London, UK)
- Vera Thorstensen (FGV, Brazil)

12h-14h - lunch

Panel 5 - Broadening the scope and looking ahead: is there room for a Latin American law and development network? Roundtable (14:30-17h)

- Fabio Sá e Silva (IPEA – Institute of Applied Economic Research)
- Bernando Medeiros (IPEA – Institute of Applied Economic Research)
- David Trubek (University of Wisconsin, Madison)
- Mario Schapiro (FGV)
- Helena Alviar García (Universidad de Los Andes)
- Diogo R. Coutinho (USP/Cebrap)

17h – Closing session
Paula Montero (Cebrap president/USP, Brazil)
Mansueto Almeida graduated in economics from Universidade Federal do Ceará. He earned a masters degree in economics at University of Sao Paulo (USP) and is a PhD candidate in public policies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology - MIT. He is a researcher at IPEA (Institute of Applied Economic Research) and has served as monetary and finance policy coordinator at the Brazilian Ministry of Finance (1995-1997) and at Senate’s regional development and tourism commission (2005-2006). Mr. Almeida currently works at IPEA’s Sectoral and Innovation Directorate (DISET), in Brasilia.

Helena Alviar Garcia holds an LLM and SJD from Harvard Law School. She is Dean and Associate Professor of the law school at Universidad de Los Andes in Bogotá – Colombia. Professor Alviar has published extensively in the areas of feminist theory, law and development, legal theory, administrative law and social policy. Among her most representative publications are: The Classroom and the Clinic: The Relationship Between Clinical Legal Education, Economic Development and Social Transformation, UCLA, 2009; ¿Quién paga o debe pagar por los costos del Estado Social de Derecho? Revista de Derecho Público No. 22, 2009; Derecho, Desarrollo y Feminismo en América Latina, Universidad de los Andes y Editorial Temis, 2008; “Propiedad”, in Cristina Motta and Macarena Saez, La mirada de los jueces, género en la jurisprudencia Latinoamericana, Red Alas, Siglo del Hombre Editores, American University and CRLP, 2008; Una mirada distinta a las transformaciones del derecho administrativo, Revista de Derecho Público No. 19, 2007.

Glauco Arbix is an Associate Professor of sociology at the University of Sao Paulo (USP) and the president of FINEP (the Brazilian research funding federal agency). From 2003 to 2006 he was the president of the Institute for Applied Economic Research (IPEA) and the general coordinator of Strategic Unit, an advisory board to the president of the republic. Since 2007, he is a member of the Brazilian National Council of Science and Technology. Prof. Arbix heads the Observatory for Innovation at the USP Institute of Advanced Studies. He earned a doctorate degree in sociology from USP in 1995 and has taught at the University of Campinas (Unicamp, 1996-1997) and at FGV (1995-1996). Prof. Arbix was a visiting scholar at MIT (1999 and 2010), Columbia University (2009), University of California, Berkeley (2008) and at the London School of Economics (2001).

Marta Arretche is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of São Paulo (USP) and Director of the Center for Metropolitan Studies (CEM-Cebrap). Her main areas of research are federalism and public policies, in particular social policies. She has published several articles on the comparative analysis of decentralization and territorial politics. Prof. Arretche holds master and doctorate degrees from Unicamp (University of Campinas) and participated in pos-doc programs at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology - MIT (USA) and the European University Institute (Italy).

José Carlos Braga is a Professor at University of Campinas (Unicamp) Economics Institute, where he teaches economic theory, international economics and Brazilian economy, and an ad-hoc and non-resident researcher at IPEA (Institute for Applied Economic Research). He holds a master (1973) and a doctorate (1985) degree in economics at Unicamp and a post-doc at the University of California, Berkeley (1989). Prof. Braga has taught at FUNDAP (Public Management Development Foundation, Sao Paulo) and at École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESP, France, 1988). He has worked at the Brazilian Ministry of Finance (1985-1987) and his current research projects are with large companies internationalization policies, international finance architecture, Basel II adaptation, financial regulation and financial crisis in developing countries.

Diogo R. Coutinho is an Associate Professor at the University of Sao Paulo (USP), and a research fellow at the Brazilian Center of Analysis and Planning (CEBRAP). He holds a master from the London School of Economics and Political Science (2002) and a doctorate from the University of Sao Paulo Faculty of Law (2003). He was awarded a Chevening Scholarship.
Manuel A. GOMEZ is an Associate Professor at Florida International University College of Law in Miami, where he also serves as the Coordinator of International Legal Projects and leads the Global Legal Studies Initiative. Before joining FIU, Professor Gomez was a Lecturer in Law and a Teaching Fellow at Stanford Law School, where he had academic responsibility for the Stanford Program in International Legal Studies. Since 1995 he has also been a member of the Faculty at the Universidad Central de Venezuela Law School (Caracas, Venezuela), and in different occasions, a visiting professor at the Universidad Católica del Táchira (1996), Universidad Católica Andrés Bello (2000-2001), Universidad Metropolitana Law School (2005), and Universidad Sergio Arboleda of Colombia (2009). Professor Gomez teaches, conducts research and writes academic papers in a variety of areas including dispute resolution, comparative civil procedure, complex litigation, legal and institutional reform, legal education and the legal profession. His work has received several prestigious awards, including the Law and Society Association’s Dissertation Prize, the Richard S. Goldsmith Award in Dispute Resolution at Stanford University, as well as the annual prize awarded by the Venezuelan Studies Section of the Latin American Studies Association (LASA).

Charles D. MADDOX is an Assistant Professor of Law at Jindal Global Law School (India), where he also serves as assistant director at the Centre for Global Corporate and Financial Law and Policy. He obtained his master of law (LL.M.) in business law from the National Law School of India University, Bangalore and a juris doctor (J.D.) degree from the University of Maine School of Law, and a bachelor of arts (B.A.) from Marlboro College. Before joining Jindal Global Law School, Prof. Maddox was an international trade specialist with the International Trade Administration at the U.S. Department of Commerce. As a U.S. civil servant, he functioned as the chief of staff for the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Africa, the Middle East and South Asia. Prior to joining the Department of Commerce, Prof. Maddox acted as an advisor to the U.S. – India Business Council at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. He is an attorney at law and is admitted to the Bar in Washington, D.C. Prof. Maddox’s areas of specialization include competition law, corporate law, securities law, and international trade law.

Shunko ROJAS is a Fellow of the Harvard Law School Institute for Global Law & Policy and an S.J.D. candidate at Harvard Law School. He is currently visiting researcher at the BNDES (Brazilian Development Bank). His research focuses on law and development, and more specifically, on international political economy of development, legal regimes on foreign direct investment, and international business strategies of local firms in Latin America. He did his LL.M. at Harvard Law School (2007-2008), and holds a Master of Sciences in Global Politics from the London School of Economics (2006-2007). He graduated as Abogado at the University of Buenos Aires (2002) where he also completed master’s studies in Law and Economics (2003-2005). He has been awarded the Fulbright scholarship (2006-2008) and the Chevening scholarship (2005-2006), and participated in the U.S. International Visitor Leadership Program of the U.S. Department of State (2003). He has worked as a consultant for the World Bank, the Argentine government, the Argentine Industrial Union, and various think tanks, providing advice on a variety of issues including judicial reform, international trade, and international investment.

Michelle Ratton SANCHEZ is Professor at Getulio Vargas Foundation School of Law (DireitoGV), in Sao Paulo, Brazil, collaborator to the Brazilian Center for Analysis and Research (CEBRAP), for the project entitled “Democracy and Law in Brazil”, and the chief editor in Brazil for Pontes – entre Comércio e desenvolvimento sustentável. She has a Ph.D. from the Law School of the University of Sao Paulo (USP). She was visiting scholar at the International Law Section of the Graduate Institute of International Studies (GIIS), in Geneva, Switzerland (2001), and Global Crystal Eastman Fellow of the Global Law Program at the University of New York (2007). Her areas of interest are international economic law, recent changes in international regulation and non-state actors influence and participation in international fora and policies.

Alvaro SANTOS is an Associate Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center. He teaches and writes in the areas of international trade, law and economic development, transnational labor law, and legal theory. He is author of The Word Bank's Uses of the "Rule of Law" Promise in Economic Development, in The New Law and Development: A Critical Appraisal (Cambridge 2006), which he co-edited with David Trubek. Prior to joining the Georgetown faculty in 2007, Professor Santos taught at the University of Texas as a Visiting Assistant Professor (2005-2007). He has also taught at Tufts University, Melbourne Law School, and at the University of Turin-ILO Master's program. Professor Santos serves on the editorial boards of the Law & Social Inquiry journal and the Law and Development Review. He earned a S.J.D. and LL.M. from Harvard Law School, and a LL.B. from Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (UNAM).

Mario G. SCHAPIRO is a full time Professor at the FGV Law School. He earned an LLB (University of Sao Paulo) in 2000, a master of law (University of Sao Paulo) in 2005, and a doctorate (University of Sao Paulo) in 2009. His scholarship focuses on law and development, development finance and administrative law.

Joanne SCOTT is Professor of European Law at University College London. She writes in the areas of EU Law and WTO Law, with a particular focus on environmental governance. Her recent writings include 'In Legal Limbo: Post-Legislative Guidance as a Challenge for European Administrative Law' (2011), The Hidden World of WTO Governance' (2009, with Andrew Lang) and 'From Brussels with Love: The Transatlantic Travels of European Law and the Chemistry of Regulatory Attraction' (2009).

Fabio de Sá e SILVA is a researcher at the Institute for Applied Economic Research (IPEA), a think-tank in Brazil, where he has also served as the Coordinator of studies on State and Democracy and as the President’s Chief of Staff. Fabio holds a law degree from the University of Sao Paulo School of Law (USP) and a Master of Laws from the University of Brasilia School of Law (UnB). He is currently a PhD candidate in Law, Policy, and Society at Northeastern University (Boston, MA) on a CAPES-Fulbright fellowship. His main areas of interest are the role of law and lawyers in systems of governance, globalization, rule of law, and the institutionalization of public interest law systems in developing and transitional countries, topics in which he has taught and published extensively. He has been involved in several projects on justice and security reform in Brazil for the past years, with a special focus on promoting access to justice and improving the criminal justice system in that country.

Vera Helena THORSTENSEN is a Professor at FGV School of Economics, Sao Paulo, where she runs the Global Trade and Investment Center (CCGI). She has been the economic advisor to the mission of Brazil at WTO since 1995, following the WTO negotiations on trade policy issues and the Doha Round. Since 2001 she is the Editor of Carta de Genebra, a newsletter on WTO and the Doha Round and since 2002 she coordinates the internship program at the mission of Brazil at WTO. Since 2004 Prof. Thorstensen has been the chair of the committee on rules of origin of the WTO. She has been a visiting scholar at IBD (Inter-American Development Bank) and joined post-doctoral programs at CEPS (Centre for European Policy Studies, Brussels), Center for European Studies (Catholic University, Lisbon), Harvard University and MIT. Prof. Thorstensen holds a doctorate degree from Getulio Vargas Foundation (FGV), Sao Paulo.

David M. TRUBEK is Voss-Bascom Professor of Law Emeritus and a Senior Fellow of the Center for World Affairs and the Global Economy (WAGE) at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He is also Senior Research Fellow at the Harvard Law School's Program on the Legal Profession. A graduate of UW-Madison and the Yale Law School, Professor Trubek served as law clerk to Judge Charles E. Clark of the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals and as Legal Advisor to the USAID Mission to Brazil before entering the academy. He joined the UW Law School faculty in 1973 and served as Associate Dean for Research from 1977 to 1984. During this period he also was Director of CLRP, the Civil Litigation Research Project, which was supported by the US Department of Justice. In 1985 he founded the UW's Institute for Legal Studies which he directed from 1985-90. Professor Trubek was appointed as University Dean of International Studies in 1990 and became the founding director of the UW-Madison International Institute in 1995. After stepping down as Dean and Director of the Institute he was Director of WAGE from 2001 to 2004. He has taught at Yale and Harvard Law Schools, the Catholic University Law School in Rio de Janeiro and the FGV Law School in São Paulo and has been a Visiting Scholar in Residence at the European University Institute in Florence, the Fundação Joaquim Nabuco in Recife, Brazil, the London School of Economics, and the Maison des Sciences de L’Homme in Paris. He received the Kalven Prize from the Law and Society Association and in 2002 was appointed Chevalier des Palmes Académiques by the French Government in recognition of his work on globalization. He has written extensively on international and comparative law as well as other topics in legal studies and has published articles and books on the role of law in development, human rights, European integration, the changing role of the legal profession, and the impact of globalization on legal systems and social protection schemes. He has also made contributions in critical legal theory, the sociology of law, and civil procedure. His most recent books are The New Law and Economic Development : A Critical Appraisal (with A.Santos) (2006) and Direito, Planejamento e Desenvolvimento do Mercado de Capitais Brasileiro 1965- 70 (with Gouveia Viera and Sa) (2nd edition 2011) Currently, he serves as Principal Investigator of LANDS, the project on Law and the New Developmental State; co-PI of the project on Law and Development in Brazil in Global Context which is being conducted by the UW-Madison and the FGV Law School in Sao Paulo with support from the Brazilian Agency for Industrial Development and the Tinker Foundation; and co-Director of GLEE, the Project on Globalization, Lawyers and Emerging Economies.

Fabio VERAS holds a PhD in Economics (UCL-London) and joined IPC - the International Policy Centre for Inclusive Growth (former International Poverty Centre) in 2004 as a secondment from the Institute of Applied Economic Research (IPEA) of the Brazilian government. He coordinates the IPC-IG research programme on cash transfer and currently is involved in a comparative research on cash transfers in Latin America and Africa. His area of interest are evaluation of cash transfer programmes and social policies, social protection, poverty and inequality.